CHEMISTRY PROFESSOR RECEIVES HAWORTH AWARD

Raymond Lemieux, Professor of Chemistry, will become the fourth recipient of the Haworth Award and Medal in April, 1978, and will deliver the Haworth Memorial Lecture at that time.

Dr. Lemieux is an internationally renowned carbohydrate chemist—he was the first to synthesize sucrose—and one of Canada's foremost scientists. The Haworth Award is one of the most prestigious of those offered by the Chemical Society and was established in 1971 to commemorate Sir Norman Haworth, an organic chemist who received the Nobel Prize for, among other things, synthesizing Vitamin C.

Dr. Lemieux is an Albertan. He was educated at this University, McGill, and Ohio State. While he was a Senior Research Officer with the National Research Council for four years and then Professor and Chairman of the Department of Chemistry at the University of Ottawa for seven years, he has been associated with this University since 1961.

Dr. Lemieux's first major contribution as a chemist was the synthesis of sucrose, or common sugar, a feat which had challenged organic chemists for over a century. This he accomplished in his thirties. He later did pioneering work involving the use of nuclear magnetic resonance spectroscopy that resulted in the determination of the structure of a number of carbohydrates and in the synthesis of a number of antibiotics. His work in antibiotics, particularly aminoglycosides, penicillins, and cephalosporins, has led to the commercialization of a number of new drugs. And his research in the related field of synthetic blood group antigens has led to discoveries that the National Director of the Red Cross Blood Transfusion Service, R.A. Perrault, feels "will greatly contribute to the preparation of blood banking reagents throughout Canada and the whole world for years to come . . . and may be the stepping stone to even more exciting findings in tumour immunology." W.G. Schneider, President of the National Research Council, says of Dr. Lemieux's work that "the same high standard of quality and virtuosity" distinguishes all of it.

In addition to his academic pursuits, Dr. Lemieux has always been concerned with the application of his research, particularly in the chemical and pharmaceutical industry. He founded his own company, Raylo Chemicals, in Edmonton, to undertake its own research and marketing as well to conduct consulting and contractual researching. He was President and Research Director of the company from 1966 until 1976.

Dr. Lemieux is a much-honored scientist. The Royal Society of Canada made him a Fellow in 1955, that in London in 1967. He was made an Officer of the Order of Canada in 1968 and has received honorary degrees from the Universities of New Brunswick, Ottawa, and Provence and Laval University. In addition, he has received a number of awards, including two from the Chemical Institute of Canada and one from the American Chemical Society.

He is the author of over 150 scientific papers and the owner of more than twenty patents, has presented invited lectures in a dozen countries, and has been a member of several institutions' boards and councils.

PEOPLE

- Heather Lyons, Assistant Professor of Educational Foundations, recently read a paper on "Quebec nationalism and language: a contemporary educational perspective" to a session of the Canadian Society for Cultural and Intellectual History. Professor Lyons has also become English Secretary of the CSCIH.
- L.C. Green, University Professor in Political Science, has been appointed Executive Director of the symposium on Law and Athletics, which will be organized by the Legal Education Society of Alberta at the time of the Commonwealth Games.
- Franz H. Vitovec, Professor of Metallurgy and Chairman of the Department of Mineral Engineering, has been elected a Fellow of the American Society for Metals. The award, which will be presented at a meeting of the Society next October in Chicago, provides recognition for distinguished contributions to the field of metallurgy and materials science.
- Shirley M. Stinson, Professor in the Faculty of Nursing and Division of Health Services Administration, gave a panel presentation on "Financing health services education and research" at a recent conference on Health Administration held in Ottawa. She also presented a paper at the National Conference on the Preparation of Top Level Nurse Administrators held on 15 and 16 July in Minneapolis.

- Several members of the History Department recently attended the annual meetings of the Canadian Historical Association and the Canadian Society for Cultural and Intellectual History.

Olive Dickason, Assistant Professor, read a paper to the CSCIH on "Amer-Indian sovereignty and territoriality: a Renaissance perspective." Doug Owram, Assistant Professor, read a paper to the CSCIH on "The foundation of western Canadian historiography: the Manitoba school, 1880-1914." Helen Liebel-Weckowicz, Professor, read a paper to the same meeting on "The search for history as science: an evolution from Vico to Hegel?" Professor Liebel-Weckowicz also acted as a commentator on a panel entitled "German liberals and feminism" at a joint session of the CHA and the CSCIH. Ronald Hamowy, Professor, chaired a panel on the CSCIH on French propaganda during the 1930s, and he also commented on papers read to a CHA panel on the Scottish Enlightenment.

Professor Liebel-Weckowicz is also President of the CSCIH. She was recently elected by the Council of the CHA to serve on the Canadian National Committee for organizing the next International Historical Congress, to be held in Bucharest in 1980. Professor Hamowy has recently become an editor of the new Journal of Libertarian Studies; a co-editor of the journal is Friedrich Hayek, Nobel Laureate in Economics.

VISITORS

- J.K.P. Watson, Senior Lecturer in Comparative Education at the University of Reading, visited the Department of Educational Administration in the month of July. Dr. Watson is currently completing a book on education in Thailand, where he has worked under the auspices of the British Council. During the past few years, he has been codirector of a course entitled "New Developments in the Organization and Administration of Education in England and Wales" for Canadian educators visiting Britain.
